THE BEST
FAMILY MEDICINE

She Has Ever Known. Words of Praise from a New York Lady for AYER'S PILLS

"I would like to add my testimony to that of others who have used Ayer's Pills, and to say that I have taken them for many years, and always derived the best results from their use. For stomach and liver troubles, and for the cure of headache caused by these derangements, Ayer's Pills cannot be equaled.

When my friends ask me what is the best remedy for disorders of the stomach, liver, or bowels, my invariable answer is, Ayer's Pills. Taken in season, they will break up a cold, prevent la grippe, check fever, and regulate the digestive organs. They are easy to take, and are, indeed, the best all-round family medicine I have ever known."—

ROSE AYLMER'S GRAVE.

An English grave "neath Indian skies, Marked by a simple stone,
This is where Rose Aymer lies,
Far, flowerless, and alone.

Rose Aymer was a poet's love, Sweet, beautiful and young;
Her elegy, in melody,
The poet lover sung.

About her grave no flowers grow,
No pleasant boughs are stirred,
No gentle sun, no quiet snow,
No English breeze or bird.

The sun of springtime scorches the stone,
In summer, storm and rave
The winds that herald the cyclone,
The rains that slake the grave.

Rose Aymer's sister flowers should spring
In whitest bloom above;
The roses Lander could not bring,
Far distant from her love.

And now a snake makes his nest in her bed,
The crows perch on the rail,
A kite sweeps past, and overhead
The unclean vultures sail.

"Ah, what avails the sequestered race, Ah, what the forest winds of grief,
What every virtue, every grace!
Rose Aymer, all were thine.

Rose Aymer, when these wakeful eyes
May meet, but never see A night of memories and of sighs
I consecrate to thee."

Ah, why regret the gloomy hours,
The land of banishment?
This is her grave, but Lander's verse Rose Aymer's monument.

Rose Aymer, on thy nameless lies Love's rose immortally,
The Rose of memories and of sighs, Once consecrate to thee.

THE RAVEN.

The Count Stibor was as brave as he was highborn, and riches had poured in upon him until he had become one of the wealthiest nobles in the empire.

Changed that one day he hunted with a game retinue among the mountain fastnesses, and glorious was the sport of that gallant hunt. The light footed chamois, the antlered deer, the fierce wolf, and the grizzly bear were alike laid low. When the sun was about to set, he formed his temporary encampment on the pleasant bank of the Wang.

Just where, on the opposite side of the channel, a lone and precipitous rock turned aside the glancing waters.

The heart of Stibor was merry, for the sport had gone well throughout the day, and when his rude tents were raised, the savory steam of the venison and the sparkle of the wine cup brightened his humor, and he listened, with a smile upon his lip, to the light sallies of the joyous company.

As they talked idly of the day's hunting, however, one wished that the deer had taken another direction; a second that he had not missed a certain stag; a third that he had not lost his contemplated chase in the underworld. In short, there was not an individual among them who had not some regret to blend with his triumph, like a drop of gall in a cup of honey.

"Hear me," said the magnificent noble, during a transient pause in the conversation. "I seem to be the only hunter of the day to whom the sport has been without a blemish. It is true that all your misfortunes are light enough, but I will have no shadow cast upon my own joy, and therefore to compensate you for these alleged mishaps, each of you is free to make a wish, and if it be within my power to grant it, I pledge my word that it shall be fulfilled."

A murmur of admiration ran through the astonished circle, and the work of ambition soon began. Gold was the first thing asked for, for avarice is ever the most greedy of all passions, and then revenge upon an enemy, for human nature will often sacrifice personal gain to vengeance, and then power, authority, rule over their fellow men, the darling occupation and privilege of poor, weak, self-misjudging mortals. In short, there was no boon within the reach of reason which had not been asked and promised.

When the eye of Stibor fell upon his jester, who was standing apart playing with the tassels of his vest and apparently quite uninterested in a subject which had made all around him eager and excited.

"And thou, knave," said the noble, "hast thou nothing to ask? Thou must bestir thyself, or thy master will have little left to give, if the game go on thus."

"Fear not, fear not," replied the fool.
"The claimants have been courteous, for they have not touched upon that portion of thy possessions which I covet. They have demanded gold, blood, domain, the power to enjoy themselves, and to render others wretched—they are welcome to all they want. I only ask for stones."

A loud laugh ran through the circle.
"Stones, Betzko!" echoed the astonished Stibor. "Thou shalt have them in what shape thou wilt."

"I take thee at thy word, Count Stibor.
I will have them yonder on the crest of the bold rock that stands out like a beacon during the foot of man, and in the shape of a good castle in which I may hold my own, should need be," was the unlooked for reply.

"Thou hast lost thy chance, Betzko," cried a voice amid the universal merriment that ensued. "Not even Stibor can accomplish thy desire."

"Who dares to say that Stibor cannot grant it, if such be his will?" demanded the chief in a voice of thunder as he rose proudly from the earth where he had been seated on a couch of skins.

"The castle of Betzko shall be built!"
And it was built, and within a year a festival was held there, and the noble became ennobled of his own creation, for the fair dawns admired its courtly walls and its commanding towers. And thus Count Stibor bought off the rock fortress from his jester with gold, and made it the chief place of his abode, and he fostered there with his guests and made merry with music and dances until it seemed as though life was to be for him one long festival. Men often walk over the spot which afterward opens to bury them.

Little by little the habit of self indulgence grew upon the luxurious noble.
Yet still he loved the chase beyond all else on earth, and his dogs were of the fleetest and finest breed.

He was one day at table, surrounded by the richest viands and the rarest wines, when one of his favorite hounds entered the hall howling with pain and drugging after him, his wounded foot, which dropped blood as he moved along.

Terror seized upon the hearts of the vassals even before the rage of their lord burst forth, and when it came terrible was the storm, as he vowed vengeance against the wretch who had dared thus to mutilate an animal that he valued.

An aged slave flung himself at his feet. "Mercy, my lord, mercy!" he exclaimed piteously. "I have served you faithfully for years. My hand is gray with time, and my life has been one of hardship. Have mercy on me, for he flow upon me and would have torn me had I not defended myself against his fury. I might have destroyed him, but I sought only to preserve myself. Have mercy upon my weakness!"

The angry chieftain, however, heeded not the anguish of his gray hairs, and, pointing to a low balcony which extended across the window of the apartment and hung over the precipice, he commanded that the wretched old man should be flung from thence into the river which flowed beneath as an example to those cattiffs who valued their own worthless lives above those of his noble house.

As the miserable tools of an imperious will were dragging the unhappy victim to his fate he raised his voice and cursed the tyrant whom they served, and having done so he summoned him to appear at the tribunal, which none could escape, to answer for this his last crime, on its first anniversary. But the powerful chief heeded not his words.

"Away with him!" he said sternly as he lifted his goblet to his lips; and there was a struggle, a shriek of agony and then a splash upon the river wave, and all was silent.

A year went by in festival and pride, and the day on which that monstrous crime had been committed returned unheeded. There was a feast in the castle, and Stibor, who month after month gave himself up yet more to self indulgence, gradually became heavy with wine, and his attendants carried him to a couch beside the same window whence the unfortunate slave had been hurled 12 months before.

The guests drank on for a time, and made merry at the insensibility and helplessness of their powerful host, and then they departed, each to his business or pleasure, and left him there alone.

The casement had been flung back to admit the air freely into the heated apartment, and the last reveler had scarcely departed, when a raven—the sombre messenger of Nemesis—flung thrice round the battlements of the castle, and then alighted on the balcony.

Several of the guests amused their idleness by watching the evolutions of the ill omened bird, but one having lost sight of it they turned away and thought of it no more.

Meanwhile a work of agony and death had been delegated to that dark winged messenger. It rested but an instant from its flight ere once more it hovered over the couch of the sleeping Stibor, and then, darting down, its sharp beak penetrated at once thrust from his eye into his brain!

The agony awoke him, but he awoke only to madness from its extent. He recoiled to and fro, venting imprecations to which none was by to listen, and writhed until his tortured body was one convulsion. At length, by a mighty effort, striving to accomplish he knew not what, he hurled himself over the balcony, at the selfsame spot whence the slave had been flung by his own command, and as he fell the clear waters of the Wang for a time resisted the impure burden and threw him back shrieking and howling from their depths.

But he sank at last, and when his parasites sought him on the morrow they found only the couch on which he had lain and a few drops of blood and that he had died a death of violence and vengeance.

They searched for him carefully on all sides, and then, when they were quite assured that he had passed away never to return, whispers grew of the gray headed slave and the mysterious raven—until by degrees the fate of the famous Stibor was fashioned into form.

Legend grew into a legend throughout the country, scarce the village maiden in her twilight walk and the lone shepherd in his watch upon the hills.—Exchange.

The Vigesimal System.

One of the facts presented by Professor Conant in his interesting volume, "The Number Concept," is the way Celtic races have held on to the vigesimal system, or numeration having 20 as a basis. It is found in old Irish, Welsh, Gaelic, Manx and Breton. When, however, as if the effects of Roman conquest were visible, for in Irish, Gaelic and Breton "mile" or "mil" is 1,000.

Another peculiarity is that in French the persistence of the vigesimal system is visible. The French 80 is quatre-vingt-dix, or four times 20, with 10 added. In old French sixante for 60 does not appear. It was treis vint, or three times 20. One hundred and twenty was six vint—that is, six times 20—and sept vint, or seven times 20, was 140. In Africa the vigesimal system is rare, but in Asia it is not uncommon, and is in use in northern Siberia.

Mrs. Howe's Husband.

Apropos of the "new woman," somebody resurrected an old story the other day about Mrs. Julia Ward Howe that may or may not be true. At all events, it was worth resurrecting. The story goes that Mrs. Howe was one fine morning walking down Beacon street, Boston, when she met a friend, who asked her how Dr. Howe was. "Dr. Howe?" repeated Mrs. Howe vaguely. Then, as if suddenly recollecting herself: "Oh, he's quite well, I'm sure. I remember seeing in the morning paper that he was at some meeting or other last evening."

AMONG THE CHEAVES.

Lord, the fields are ripe with corn;
The laborer goeth singing:
His joyful heart is heavenward borne
On music's plumed winging:
The sky is fair, with here and there
A downy cloudlet sweeping;
Lord, in this time of happy cheer
What do I with my weeping?

Oh, shame, among the golden sheaves
To stain the day with mourning!
Oh, shame on him who lily grieves,
God's harvest blessing scoring!
The heavens above look down in love;
The earth smiles back victorious;
By hill and vale where'er you rove
The harvest fields shine glorious.

But on my soul a sadness lies,
Which deeper by the story Of nature's patient sacrifice
Thus perfected to glory.
Each faithful heart hath borne its part,
The autumn treasure sharing,
But I, I only know the smart
Of failure and despairing.

Lord, had all these weary days,
That wasted weeks of grieving,
Been spent in showing forth thy praise,
I had had corn for sheaving.
Not empty hands and empty land
Had been my harvest measure, Nor sad and stricken should I stand,
A mark for thy displeasure.

Lo! yet there comes a thought to me;
To staid and sober living With bended head and bowed knee Go gleaming, gleaming slowly.
They did not sow, they did not mow; Dropt ears are all they gather.
Wouldst take such labor even now—My gleanings, O my Father!

—E. E. Kitten in Good Words.

THE BREAD OF THE WORLD.

What This Important Food Is Made of In Different Countries.

In England and America wheat bread is within the reach of all, and scarcely a thought given to the fact that only a small portion of the earth's inhabitants enjoy it. It is only during the last century that wheat bread has come into common use. A hundred years ago wealthy families in England used only a peck of wheat a year and that at Christmas, eating oat cakes during the remainder of the time.

The German "pumpernickel" is a rye bread with a curious, sour taste, but after eating it awhile one acquires quite a taste for it. It is less nutritious than wheat bread. In the poorer parts of Sweden the people bake their rye bread only twice a year and store it away, so that eventually it is as hard as bricks.

Farther north still barley and oats become the chief bread corn. But in the distinct north is where man is put to thought to provide himself with bread.
In Lapland if a man trusted to grain he would starve, so the people eat out their scanty store of oats with the inner bark of the pine, and after grinding this mixture it is made into large flat cakes, which, after all, are not half bad.

In dreary Kamchatka the pine or birch bark by itself, well ground, pounded and baked, constitutes the whole of the native bread food. Bread and butter is represented by a dough of pine bark spread with seal fat. In certain parts of Siberia the people not only grind the pine bark, but cut off the tender shoots, which procedure must give the bread an unpleasantly resinous flavor.

In Iceland the lichen is scraped off the rock, made into bread puddings and put into soup. In Russia and China buckwheat is pressed into service. It makes a palatable bread, though of a dark violet tinge.

In Italy and Spain chestnuts are cooked, ground into meal and used for bread and soup thickening. Millet furnishes a white bread in Arabia, Egypt and India.
This grain is credited with being the very first used in breadmaking.

Rice bread is still the staple food of the Chinese, Japanese and Indians.

In the Indian archipelago the starchy pith of the sago palm is made into bread, and in parts of Africa the natives use a certain root for the same purpose.

Saved by a Shot.

Sir George Yule of the Indian civil service was a mild, sweet natured man, but a "mighty hunter," who had killed hundreds of bears and shot tigers on foot and from horse and elephant. Sir Edward Braddon, in his "Thirty Years of Shikar," tells of Sir George's narrow escape from death in an encounter with a tiger.

He was standing outside of a jungle fan which a tiger was being driven by beaters. The tiger came from the jungle within a few feet of the spot where Yule stood and rushed at him. He had only time to bring his rifle up to his hip and fire as the beast sprang upon him, knocking him to the ground, smashing in his sun helmet and tearing his shoulder and chest.

The tiger was dead when it reached the ground, killed by the chance shot so coolly fired.

The Compliments of the Street.

In a little crush of trucks and wagons at Broadway and Eleventh street the other day one driver said to another, of a third who had just driven by rather clumsily, "He's a farmer and a clam digger, and the next time he comes down this way I'm going to punch his head."

But ferocious as these words were they were not spoken ferociously, and they were smilingly received, and one did not understand them necessarily to mean an inordinate amount of bloodshed, nor to contain any reflection upon the occupations of farming and clam digging, but

INDEX-TRIBUNE

SONOMA, AUGUST 8, 1896.

H. H. GRANICE - EDITOR.

AN ANONYMOUS COMMUNICATION.

We are in receipt of a communication signed "Citizen," but as the author's name does not accompany the same we decline to give it space in these columns. If the writer will send in his name, not necessarily for publication but as a guarantee of good faith, "in she goes." Otherwise, the communication will be consigned to the waste basket. There are some people in this town who want the editor of the INDEX-TRIBUNE to assume all the responsibility of publishing things of which he knows positively nothing about. Now, if "Citizen" knows that a city ordinance has been violated by "young hoodlums" he should swear out a warrant for their arrest, in which case the INDEX-TRIBUNE, which is always in favor of law and order, will stay with him through thick and thin.

THE WATER QUESTION.

The City Trustees are hard at work investigating the various water supplies adjacent to town. Next week the services of a civil engineer will be engaged to assist them in their labors. The Trustees are going about the matter in a business-like manner and are working for what they conceive to be for the best interests of the people of Sonoma and they should be upheld by every good citizen in the town. Give them a chance to present to the voters a proposition and if it does not suit you can then kick with both feet.

MUST READ AND WRITE.

Else One Cannot Register—Important Decision by the District Attorney.

District Attorney Seawell has sent the following written opinion to County Clerk Fulton in regard to educational qualifications, voted upon and adopted by the people at the last election:

To Somers B. Fulton, Esq., County Clerk: DEAR SIR—In reply to your request of recent date in relation to the educational qualifications (constitutional amendment adopted November 6th, 1894) and its application to persons who were not legally registered voters at the time of its adoption, I will say that the strict letter of said amendment seems to exact of all persons who were not legally registered voters at the time of the adoption of said amendment, and who were not over the age of 60 years, a compliance with the terms of said provision in this that such persons must be able to read the constitution in the English language and write his own name. The provision relative to an educational qualification does not apply to persons "who now (November 6th, 1894) have the right to vote."

No person who was not legally registered at the time said amendment went into effect then had the right to vote. This being true it follows that all such persons must comply with the educational qualifications in the same sense as though such persons had never before exercised the rights of voters. It is somewhat difficult to discern the intention of the framers of the amendment, nevertheless the language is plain, I would, therefore, advise you to follow the course indicated herein until the courts shall order otherwise. Respectfully,

EMMET SEAWELL,
District Attorney.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address, F. J. ## Accident.

Ida Deutel, the nine-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Deutel of El Verano, had her left elbow dislocated on Sunday morning last. She was riding horseback, and while galloping down Spain street the animal stumbled and fell, throwing the little rider violently to the ground with the above result. The child was picked up and taken home by parties who witnessed the accident. Subsequently Dr. Davis was sent for and reduced the dislocation, which was not of a serious nature.

THE CITY TRUSTEES.

Municipal Water Works Committee Report Progress.

The Board of City Trustees met in regular monthly session last Monday evening. All the members were present as follows: J. H. Seipp, President; V. Bulotti, J. E. Poppe, L. Modini and Henry Hartin. After the reading of the minutes of the four meetings held last month the usual monthly bills were taken up and allowed.

Trustees Seipp, Bulotti and Hartin, appointed at the last meeting of the Board as a committee of three to inquire into the matter of bonding the town for a municipal water works system, reported progress.

The Street Committee reported the bridge on Fourth-street East in a weak condition.

Ordinance No. 48, changing the meetings of the Trustees from monthly to semi-monthly, was passed to last reading by the votes of Trustees Poppe, Hartin and Modini and approved by President Seipp.

On motion of Trustee Poppe the Street Committee was instructed to have the fire hydrant on Spain street, near First-street West, properly repaired.

A communication was received from parties who live out of town and have most of their printing done in San Francisco, begging for a part of the city's printing. The communication was tabled and no action taken.

On Motion of Trustee Hartin, seconded by Trustee Poppe, Clerk Breitenbach was instructed to give notice that the Board of Equalization will be in session on Monday, August 10th, at 10 A. M.

Clerk Breitenbach reported that Sonoma county was indebted to the city in the sum of $260 for repairing culverts on Fourth-street West.

The following bills were allowed and ordered paid:

H. Castagnasso, labor.....$ 12.00

A. M. Haraszthy, labor..... 5.00

L. Breitenbach, labor..... 1.00

J. H. Albertson, supplies..... 5.40

J. E. Robin, salary, etc..... 15.00

THE FIRE FIEND.

Close Call for the Donahue Depot.

The depot of the San Francisco and North Pacific Railway Company at this place narrowly escaped destruction by fire on Tuesday night last.

About nine o'clock in the evening as Section Boss Nick Ahern was leaving the postoffice for his home on Second-street East he observed smoke arising in the vicinity of the depot. Fearing that the building was on fire he hastened to the depot, and none too soon either. Upon arriving at the depot he discovered the planks of the platform in front of the building to be on fire and burning fiercely. The fire had evidently been started from a lighted cigar stump which had been carelessly thrown aside by one of the many people who congregate at the depot upon the arrival of the train at 7:15 every evening.

Several parties in the near vicinity came to Mr. Ahern's assistance and they succeeded in putting out the fire with the aid of the water from Mr. Aguilion's artesian well.

Had Mr. Ahern been less thoughtful and paid no heed to the smoke seen arising several blocks away the depot would have been a mass of flames in a short time, as the structure is isolated from the rest of the town and few people have occasion to happen along that way of an evening after the arrival of the last train. Aside from the burning of several two inch planks no damage was done.

BULL DOG VS. COON.

A Disgraceful Affair Frustrated by City Marshal Robin.

On Saturday last J. H. Seipp, President of City Trustees, and City Marshal Robin received the following communication:

President City Trustees, Sonoma: Some time ago a fight took place between a bull dog and a coon in this place. It is said another fight will come off soon of the same kind. This kind of sport is both brutal and disgusting and should be stopped by you. The coons are already in town for the next fight.

The fight, however, did not take place in town as the City Marshal was on the lookout to stop the disgraceful affair. It is reported that a barn was secured on the outskirts of town and the contest between the bull dog and the coon was witnessed by a number of young men, who probably did not know that they were violating the law in attending such an exhibition, and were subject to prosecution, conviction and fine or imprisonment.

The Attorney-General has given it as his opinion that Monday, the 10th day of August is, the last day of registration. All citizens who are not registered on that day will lose their votes, and it behooves those who have not re-registered to get a "move on."

The Shakers are a Happy Community

It is said, but the shaker who shakes because he can't help it is by no means a happy individual. So shakes the person troubled with chills and fever. The quivering and shuddering sensation is followed by no less a plague, namely, a burning fever, which is followed by a perspiration bath that leaves the unhappy sufferer "as weak as a cat," a most unfortunate simile, by the way, as the cat, for its size, is a particularly muscular animal. Under the above circumstances vital stamina is soon used up. What will recuperate it? Hostetter's stomach Bitters, which eradicates malarial disease in every form repairs its terrible ravages upon the system. Derangement of the liver always accompanies malarial disorder. To the relief of this complaint, the Bitters is admirably adapted. No less efficacious and thorough is it for kidney trouble, nervousness, rheumatism and neuralgia. A wineglassful three times a day.

This Horse Can Count.

There is a grocer doing business not far from the south end of Virginia avenue who has a horse that is very regular in its habits. He has learned that the bell in the engine house No. 8 strikes 13 times every day at noon, and when the bell comes and the horse hears the bell he turns his ears forward and waits for the boy who always feeds him at that time. The horse will look anxiously toward the store and wait a few moments. If the boy does not soon make his appearance, the horse gets tired of waiting and slowly walks to the stable. Every day as soon as the bell rings the first time at noon people near by notice that the horse becomes restless, and while a few moments before his head was drooping, at the first stroke of the bell his eyes open wide and he takes on an air of close attention.

One day the grocer concluded to try a mean trick on the horse to see how much he really did know about the number of times the bell rang. They pulled the rope that rings the bell 11 times and then stopped. Immediately the horse's eyes closed and his head dropped into the same listless position it had maintained for some time. The boy soon came out and got into the wagon. He drove home and ate his own dinner, but did not take the horse to the stable. On his return he stopped and put the horse in the stable and fed him. The whole matter seemed to be a surprise to the horse, and now the people in the neighborhood firmly believe the horse can count.—Indianapolis Journal.

Malarial Soil.

The opinion is expressed by Dr. Bachman, an accepted authority in such investigations, that the long current belief that the source of malaria is in the air is erroneous. The germ, he says, which is of soil origin, is strictly a protozoa, reaching its highest development in low, moist ground, with a favorable temperature. Surrounded by the proper soil conditions, this protozoa passes from one stage of life into another with considerable rapidity, so that in the present state of experimental knowledge it is impossible to identify it. Further, this protozoa passes through so many forms or stages of life that in some of these stages it is light enough to float and be transported by the moist air of low grounds, but in this state is comparatively harmless except under extraordinary conditions. Not until the surface water is used does any real mischief begin, when by reason of higher development it has become much more violent than that floating in the air, and a very short period of incubation is sufficient to develop a severe case of malarial fever in the newcomer who uses the surface water. From personal observation, Dr. Bachman declares that the exclusive use of pure, deep seated water affords entire immunity against malaria in sections of country where no white man would dare to live using the surface water.—New York Tribune.

Evolution of the Microscope.

The microscope has been very slowly evolved and is the creation of no one man. In its present form it is, like a living species according to Darwin, the outcome of the survival of the fittest of innumerable variations, the majority of which have been discarded. Indeed to one interested in microscopes and familiar with the present model, nothing can seem queerer than the old forms which prevailed during the earlier half of this century and have since become extinct. In the evolution of the microscope two factors have been dominant, the demand for optical improvement and the demand for mechanical convenience. Both of these demands have been well met, so that there appears little left for the future to achieve until an entirely new direction is opened for further evolution. It need hardly be pointed out that the optical part is the essential part of a microscope. The optical performance of the best microscopes is today perfect, having become so very slowly by numerous small improvements. Although magnifying glasses were invented, it is said, in the twelfth century, compound microscopes with achromatic lenses have been in use barely three-quarters of a century, while the introduction of homogeneous immersion lenses dates from 1876, and of the perfected apochromatic lenses from 1886.—Charles Sedgwick Minot in North American Review.

His Present.

A little fellow came home from school the other day and announced to his mother: "My teacher said it was his birthday today, so I went out at noon and bought her a present with my 25 cents. I knew you would like to have me." His mother looked a little anxious, "And what did you buy?" she asked. "Handkerchiefs," he answered proudly. "I thought those were a nice, useful present. And I got six for a quarter. Wasn't that cheap?" His mother replied faintly that it was very cheap indeed.—New York Times.

Consoling.

Dr. Coke, at one time chaplain of Greenwich hospital, was, according to James Payn, "a churchman of the tawny port wine school." When called in to minister to one of the patients on his deathbed and finding him perturbed as to his ghostly welfare, he comforted him by saying: "Don't concern yourself about that, my dear fellow. That's my affair."

Morality.

Infinite toil will not enable you to sweep away a mist, but by ascending a little you may often look over it altogether. So it is with our moral improvement. We wrestle bravely with a vicious habit, which could have no hold upon us if we ascended into a higher moral atmosphere.—Hilps.

Limitations of Heredity.

Men are the kind of husbands that their wives make them. No man was born a husband, it should be remembered. Men inherit disease, temper, vices and moles, but they don't inherit wives.—Aitchison Globe.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

Second Old Lady—That's strange. There never was any consumption in his family as I heard of.

First Old Lady—Oh, that don't make no difference! My sister's husband was carried off by gastric fever, and they never had no gas in the house at all. They always burned kerosene.—London Fun.

A man's time, when well husbanded, is like a cultivated field, of which a few acres produce more of what is useful to life than extensive provinces, even of the richest soil, when overrun with weeds and brambles.—Hume.

A camel driver in Persia is paid $7 a month and boards himself.

Sir Walter Raleigh's Pipe.

Among the many anecdotes told of Raleigh's practices with his pipe may be mentioned that of his outwitting the queen in a wager she laid with the gallant knight respecting the weight of the smoke which exhaled from a pipeful of tobacco. "I can assure your majesty," said Raleigh, "that I have so well experienced the nature of it that I can exactly tell even the weight of the smoke in any quantity I consume." "I doubt it much, Sir Walter," replied Elizabeth, thinking only how impossible it must be to catch the smoke and put it in a balance, "and will wager you 20 angels that you do not solve my doubt." Whereupon Raleigh drew forth a quantity of the weed, placed it in finely adjusted scales, and, having ascertained its weight, commenced to smoke it, carefully preserving the ashes. These at the finish he weighed with great exactness.

Then would it dawn upon her majesty how the wager was to end. "Your majesty," said Raleigh, "cannot deny that the difference hath evaporated in smoke." "Truly I cannot," was her reply. Then, turning to those around her, who were eying with amusement the curious play on the pipe, she continued, "Many laborers in the fire have I heard of (alluding to alchemists) who turned their gold into smoke, but Sir Walter is the first who has turned smoke into gold."—Gentleman's Magazine.

Of Course It Worked.
The young man was bringing to bear all his limited attainments as a contortionist in his efforts to see around the tall, wide hat worn by the sweet girl in front of him.

The young woman whom he was accompanying saw him and pitied him. Then a knowing smile passed over her face, and she leaned over and whispered loudly enough for the girl with the big hat to hear:

"What a lovely hat that girl in front of you has on!"
He looked fierce, but said nothing, and the owner of the hat stared straight ahead with a pleased expression.

"What a pity it is!" the young woman cast a glance at his companion which was eloquent with undying admiration and eternal gratitude.—Philadelphia Times.

The Cruel Truth.
Years ago a member of the Indiana legislature, in a brand new suit of broadcloth and a silk hat, gold headed cane and white lawn tie, wandered up into the sanctum of The Courier-Journal, stood around in a listless way, looked over the papers, went down stairs and came back several times. He was asked to take a seat, which he declined elaborately, and ended by drawing his chair in a confidential way up to the "Roundabout" man's desk.

"Could you," said he, "put in the paper that I am at the Galt House with my bride, and just fling in something about my being a prominent Indian?" I don't care anything about this sort of thing myself, but you know how the women are. I want 50 copies of the paper sent to this address," and he laid down $2.50, grinned, got red in the face, said "Good morning" and vanished.

Next morning he read that "Mr. John R. Huckleberry requests us to say that he is at the Galt House with his bride; that he is a prominent member of the legislature of Indiana and that he himself, personally, cares nothing about newspaper notoriety, but that his society would be highly gratifying to Mrs. Huckleberry." He added that he wanted 50 copies of the paper for distribution to his constituents.—Washington Star.

In Full Mourning.
"Some people go to the extremes in the wearing of mourning for deceased relatives," said a prominent man about town. "Now, the other day I was walking along the street when I passed a man dressed in a black suit, black tie, hat and gloves, and with hair and whiskers abnormally dark. I didn't recognize him until he spoke to me. Then I realized that he was a barber who used to shave me for a number of years. When I saw him last, his hair and whiskers were gray. 'You looked changed,' I said to him. He wiped a tear from his eye and said: 'Yah, I must have some troubles with mine family. My son-in-law he did die on Ven's day, and I am sorry.' He had actually dyed his hair and whiskers in the memory of his son-in-law!"—Philadelphia Record.
